

ALC Statement on the Death of Nick Dimopoulos

The Australian Logistics Council (ALC) pays tribute to the late Nick Dimopoulos, Chief Executive of the National Transport Commission, who passed away on 8 February 2013.

“I was saddened to learn of the passing of Nick Dimopoulos, and on behalf of ALC, I express our deep condolences to his family, friends and colleagues,” said Michael Kilgariff, ALC Managing Director.

“Nick was a tireless advocate for transport reform in Australia and he brought to the task enormous determination, purpose and vision.

“Importantly, he understood not only the economic benefits of reform, but also the social benefits which flow to all Australians.

“Nick played an instrumental role in developing national regulators for heavy vehicles, rail safety and maritime safety – all of which were recently established.

“ALC pays tribute to Nick on this significant achievement, along with many others he was responsible for in both the public and private sectors throughout his long and distinguished career.”
